COLORADO SYMPHONY ANNOUNCES BEETHOVEN SYMPHONY NO. 5 AT THE VILAR PERFORMING ARTS CENTER

Markus Stenz conducts the Colorado Symphony in a Beethoven double feature on February 24, 2022

Nov. 8, 2021 – Denver, CO – Announcing Beethoven Symphony No. 5 with the Colorado Symphony at the Vilar Performing Arts Center in Beaver Creek, Colorado on February 24, 2022.

One of the most sought-after conductors of his generation, Markus Stenz leads the Colorado Symphony in a Beethoven double feature, showcasing two cornerstones of the orchestral canon together, just as when they premiered in Vienna in 1808. Beethoven's "Pastorale" Symphony — originally dubbed "recollections of life in the country" — is a brilliant programmatic projection of nature and the composer's ultimate homage to the great outdoors, brimming with color and texture that seem accessible to all the senses as it instantly transports you to the Viennese countryside.

The Fifth Symphony — which famously begins with the ominous four-note motif signifying "fate knocking at the door" — is one of the most recognizable and well-known compositions in the classical repertoire, capping an exhilarating tour through Beethoven's heroic middle period.

Tickets will be available starting November 10, 2021 through the Vilar Performing Arts Center Box Office.
